Wilmington 14-year old diagnosed with lymphoma

By LIZZY HILL
News Correspondent

WILMINGTON — When Wilmington resident Reagan Noble, 14, was diagnosed with Stage 3 lymphoma earlier this month, her family and friends looked to the community for fundraising support and made a Gofundme page on her behalf. Since then, they've raised more than $10,000 to help Noble's family pay for treatments and other expenses.

Noble is an incoming freshman at Wilmington High School and the middle daughter of Dawn and Dan Noble. The Nobles are also parents to Tyler Noble, age 6; Ava Noble, age 11; Alexa Noble, age 16; and Morgan Breen, age 21. Breen, who helped create the Gofundme page with family friends Kayla and Alyssa Slavin, is a half-sister living with her mother and stepfather while she finishes college at SNHU.

The Gofundme page started on Aug. 13 explains the intent of their fundraising efforts.

"[Reegan] is only 14 years old and will undergo many chemo treatments, tests, and other invasive treatments," the page reads.

The team aims "to raise money for the obvious expensive medical bills, groceries, and whatever her family may need during this tough time."

In the two weeks that the page has been open, they've raised $10,125 to support Reagan Noble and family.

What the Nobles want to emphasize, as shared by Morgan Breen, is that they are amazed by the support that they've seen from the community so far. "I've been getting so many phone calls, texts, messages on Facebook and Instagram, wondering how people can donate," Breen said.

While they are certainly upset by Reegan's diagnosis, they're remaining positive and the support of the community is helping them to do that.

As for her younger sister, Breen said that Reegan is OK but having a harder time dealing with her new

Wilmington listed within the top 50 safest:

Top 137 safest communities in Massachusetts ranked Massachusetts keeps crime low — beating national rates for both property and violent crime. In fact, Massachusetts's property crime rate of 13.98 per 1,000 people is one of the lowest in the country (and it's half the national rate of 27.11). But the safest cities do even better — 90 percent reported 10 or fewer property crimes per 1,000.

The Bay State does a good job of limiting violent crime, as well. The state comes in at 3.53 violent crimes per 1,000 people, and the national rate is 4.49. With numbers like that, it's no surprise to find that Massachusetts residents have less experience with violent crime.

According to safewise.com's State of Safety study, nine percent of Massachusetts respondents personally experienced violent crime in the past year, which is 10 percent below the national average of 10 percent.

Find out more about crime in Massachusetts, and see if your city made the cut in their full list below.

INTERESTING FINDINGS

- 70 percent of the cities made the list for the second consecutive year.

- 95 percent had 12 or fewer total violent crimes reported, and 85 percent had 10 or fewer.
- There was only one murder reported by the safest cities.
- All cities reported fewer than one violent crime per 1,000.

Overall, Massachusetts is pretty close to national trends and averages for safety concerns — most responses are within four percentage points of the national averages reported on the State of Safety report.

Wilmington Memorial Library 50th anniversary

By TINA STEWART
Library Director

In May 1969, residents celebrated the opening of its new "Memorial" library on Middlesex Avenue dedicating it in memory of the four Wilmington veterans who died in the Vietnam War. The library had been previously located at Old Center School House, now the 4th of July building, where it was for almost 80 years.

When the library opened in 1969 until the late 80s, service was basically transactional in nature by answering information questions and loaning print and some nonprint materials. In 1987, when Wilmington Memorial Library (WML) joined the Merrimack Valley Library Consortium, a computerized network of area libraries, the impact of technology began to be felt as it became an integral part of the library infrastructure and service delivery.

In addition, there was a shift in how libraries were responding to the changing needs of the community by becoming less about storage space and more about community space. As the constraints of the 15,000 square foot library facility were becoming factors in meeting changing needs and providing optimum service, a study was undertaken in 1998 to explore expanding or building a new facility.

After plans to build a new library were defeated in 2002 and again in 2005, the Library Director and staff undertook a "makeover" resulting in a fresh and user friendly appearance. Although the building constraints are still challenging, the variety of programs, new initiatives and technology based services have received positive feedback from patrons.

It should be noted that the Town's Facility Master Plan, completed in 2018, again confirmed that WML "needs to be significantly" expanded. However, due to competing municipal and school priorities, building construction improvements for the library are not slated until 2034. Although a modern library facility does offer many benefits for its residents, we acknowledge that there are other important factors that define the quality of service including engaging programs, a welcoming atmosphere and service that aligns with community needs and interests.

The Wilmington Memorial Library is in the process of developing a five-year strategic plan. Going forward, we will continue to be creative on how to best utilize and maximize the space in the current facility to provide the best possible service to residents.

News and notes from WCTV

By SHAUN NEVILLE
WCTV Executive Director

Welcome back students! With the new school year upon us, that also means a new round of youth programs is right around the corner for WCTV.

Our biggest endeavor is at Wilmington High School, where our Wildcat TV after-school club is starting back up. We're looking for high school students interested in multi-media. The Wildcat TV team meets informally each week, creating videos and covering school events. This is a great chance for juniors and seniors interested in pursuing a communications-related degree as well as freshmen or sophomores who are looking to join a club that has video, editing and on-air components.

Last year, our Wildcat TV team covered more than 30 sporting events, nearly a dozen concerts, and profiled class officers, clubs & other school initiatives.

Sound interesting? Contact Youth Director Marty McCue at marty@wctv.org or stop by our space on the first floor of WHS next to the LGI. Marty is there most days and will be there after-school on Wednesday and Friday afternoons to talk to interested students.

There's no major time commitment for students who are just interested in doing things from time to time. And getting involved early on gives students a leg up for internship opportunities come junior and senior years. We already have a bunch of kids involved in this program and we look forward to adding more in the coming weeks!

As for our other youth programs, we do after-school classes for middle and intermediate school students. Those will start up soon. You're welcome to contact Marty about details or talk to your school's main office about when dates are on the calendar. They traditionally get going at the end of September or early October.

Our Saturday program is also coming back later on in September. Look for details in the next week or two.

If any of this sounds interesting, there's also an opportunity to meet our team at WCTV's Family Fun Day, which is happening on Sunday, Sept. 8 from 10 a.m.-1 p.m. at Yentile Farm.

This event is open to all Wilmington families. Come on down for music, face-painting, balloons, popcorn, ice cream and more! This will be our third year hosting this event at Yentile. It's a great way to meet our staff and hear what the station does in the community. We hope to see lots of you there!

New Programs (available on-demand at wctv.org or on TV: Comcast 9 / Verizon 37):

- Where's Wilmington: Learn about the Police Explorers Club
- All About the Flavors: Chef Bob Hamel is grilling up some fruit this summer!
- Ice Bucket Challenge: See a recap of this year's event at Rotary Park.
- Library Summer Bash: Watch some highlights from this year's event at the Swain Green.
- School Committee: It was the first meeting of the school year.

HOW TAX REFORM CHANGED ACCOUNTING METHODS FOR SMALL BUSINESSES

The Tax Cuts and Jobs Act—better known simply as tax reform—allows more small business taxpayers to use the cash method of accounting. Tax reform now defines a small business taxpayer as a taxpayer that has average annual gross receipts of $25 million or less for the three prior tax years and is not a tax shelter.

Here's how last year's legislation changed the rules for small business taxpayers. The law:

- expands the number of small business taxpayers eligible to use the cash method of accounting by increasing the average annual gross receipts threshold from $5 million to $25 million, indexed for inflation.
- allows small business taxpayers with average annual gross receipts of $25 million or less for the three prior tax years to use the cash method of accounting.
- exempts small business taxpayers from certain accounting rules for inventories, cost capitalization and long-term contracts.
- allows more small business taxpayers to use the cash method of accounting for tax years beginning after Dec. 31, 2017.

Revenue Procedure 2018-40 provides the procedures that a small business taxpayer may use to obtain automatic consent to change its methods of accounting to reflect these statutory changes.

History:

Late 1800s: Farmers and Mechanics Fair was the social event of the year

By LARZ F. NEILSON

The Farmers and Mechanics Club of Wilmington was falling apart in 1890. In spite of its annual fair, which most people loved, there was a loss of enthusiasm.

The organization, part of a national group, had formed in Wilmington in 1875. With H. Allen Sheldon as president, the F&M put together a stellar celebration of Wilmington's 150th anniversary in 1880. Deacon Sheldon, as he was known, served as president for many years. By the late 1880s, though, the clock needed winding, so to speak.

In 1891, the club breathed new life with a new member of the board. Mrs. Dr. France Hiller brought with her a $500 donation, along with a promise to cover any deficit. All of a sudden, the club and the fair sparked to life. Mrs. Hiller had long been a participant in the fair, and won the art exhibition in 1879.

A newspaper report on the fair shows the degree of success brought about by her donation.

"Among the comparatively few towns in the county which maintain the Farmer's and Mechanics Club with much of the old-time energy and enthusiasm, Wilmington must be ranked as one of the most prominent."

In 1894, Deacon Sheldon again took the helm, and the club had a few more good years.

The fair was the major social event of the year for Wilmington. There would be "flying horses" (a carousel) and a great many vendors of peanuts, bananas, panaceas, fried chips and Yankee notions. The normally-quiet town would be lively with the vendors calling out their wares.

The setting for the fair would be the town hall and the Congregational Church. The carriage sheds behind the church housed the animal exhibits, swine, sheep, chickens and horses. In the town hall, there were exhibitions of vegetables, fruit, flowers and grains. There would be many exhibits of home arts, woven work, needlework, drawings and wooden crafts.

One competition that always drew interest was ploughing. The field where St. Thomas Church now stands was the setting for that for many years. It was also set at the Swain School site as well as the field at Federal Street and Middlesex Avenue. The contest was often won by William Henry Carter 2nd, who had a farm on Shawsheen Avenue. One man who was determined to win was Mr. Spaulding, superintendent of the town poor farm. He bought Carter's team of horses, but Carter won again, with a new team.

Carter, who was known as Bill Hen 2, said the way he won the contests was the same way he plowed his fields — take it easy, do a good job and never swear at the horses.

The Farmer's and Mechanics Club undertook projects to improve the town. One year, they planted several shade trees in front of the Congregational Church. A couple of those trees lived to be 75 years old.

In the late 1890s, the club replaced the town flagpole. The following account appears in a newspaper clipping in the Wilmington Scrapbook.

The staff was blown down about two years ago in a severe thunderstorm. At the Town Meeting in March, it was voted to raise and appropriate the sum of one hundred dollars to erect a flag-staff in place of the one that was destroyed. A committee of five were appointed to take the matter in charge. Mr. Sylvester Carter offered to present to the town any tree in his lot that should be considered suitable for the mast. Mr. John T. Wild offered the

▲ H. ALLEN SHELDON

Union Ice Company's saws to draw the tree to the ground. Mr. George T. Eames offered to cut down the tree and Mr. Otis Gowing very kindly offered to furnish liquid refreshment (cider) for this Herculean task, and if my memory serves me correctly, Mr. Arthur W. Eames offered to help drink the cider. The committee selected a tree from a lot owned by Mr. William Gowing, who very generously presented it to the town, and once again, "Old Glory" floats in the free winds of Heaven.

Book Stew Review

'Whisper Network' by Chandler Baker

By EILEEN MACDOUGALL

Ripped from the headlines! I believe #METOO novels are trending for this fall and this Reese Witherspoon Book Club choice is the advance guard.

The four women protagonists and the perp are all wealthy lawyers at a Dallas corporation, so my initial reaction was "who cares?" and it didn't change much through the novel. To complicate matters, the lead character had a past consensual affair with the CEO her apparent whose pending promotion sets the whole plot in motion, as a spreadsheet of area sexual harassers circulates via email through the city and she adds his name to it.

Alternating chapters begin with funny/sad testimony by these corporate drones who try to have it all and fail (ex: "We paraded to the restroom with tampons secretly stuffed into our cardigan sleeves as though we were spies delivering encrypted information.")

The addition of a Latina to the group of white, privileged victims feels contrived and like it was gratuitously tacked on (maybe her editor said, "Hey, how come everyone in here is white?"). There are some great one liners here, but the double-twist ending comes as no big surprise, seeing as time gets short at 20 pages left.

What I'm really looking forward to is some non-fiction on this charged subject.

Quotes: "No two people of the opposite sex argue about subjects as mundane as condiments unless they want to sleep together."

"Her role was to listen to everyone around her sprout off ideas and only she could foresee the millions of things that could go wrong."

"She believed that if a friend told you a secret, you could tell your spouse."

"If you purchased a Rolex, it was like buying a boat — you were required to log the number of times you used it to justify the cost."

Seth Moulton drops out of Democratic primary race

WASHINGTON (AP) — Massachusetts Rep. Seth Moulton exited the Democratic presidential primary race on Friday, Aug. 23 becoming the second 2020 candidate to drop out this week as the field narrows.

Moulton announced the end of his campaign during remarks to the Democratic National Committee.

According to a copy of his speech obtained by The Associated Press, he said, "Though this campaign is not ending the way we hoped, I am leaving this race knowing that we raised issues that are vitally important to the American people and our future."

Moulton focused on mental health treatment after revealing his own struggles on that front as a combat veteran. He joins Washington Gov. Jay Inslee in exiting the presidential race last week.

Below is the speech Moulton gave to members of the DNC:

"Hello DNC! Thank you so much — for having me here today, and for all that you do."

"I have only been in this race since April — I got in later than many of the other candidates — but I couldn't be more proud of what our team has accomplished over these last several months."

"We have been challenging Donald Trump where he's weakest — as Commander in Chief — and showing this country that Democrats are the party of making America strong overseas and safe here at home."

"We have been running to take back patriotism from the Republican party. Because as we all know here in this room, true patriotism isn't about hugging the flag, but about fighting to make sure the flag stands for something."

"We have put forward the most aggressive call to national service in a generation, asking all 33 million young Americans to serve here at home and tackle the biggest challenges of today like climate change."

"And this campaign has even helped me face a few of my own fears."

"For the first time in my life, I talked publicly about dealing with post-traumatic stress from my four combat tours in Iraq."

"... about how I sought help to deal with my post-traumatic stress — help that has made me a better public servant and a better husband and father."

"And our team put forward a plan that will end the stigma around mental health — the same stigma that kept me silent for so long, and that kept every presidential candidate before me from talking about mental health struggles themselves."

"That's what this campaign has been about, and I'm so proud of what we've done."

"But today, I want to use this opportunity, with all of you here, to announce that I am ending my campaign for president."

"Though this campaign is not ending the way we hoped, I am leaving this race knowing that we raised issues that are vitally important to the American people and our future."

"I couldn't have done any of this without my amazing wife Liz and daughter Emmy behind me."

"I couldn't have done it

Member of Board of Winchester Hospital

We have been getting several comments about new schools and facilities being built or needed in many communities that I felt school facilities needed to be covered in a proper perspective to start off the column, plus some other topics. Realistically, looking back, many communities worked over the years pasting and band-aiding school building problems because there was little or no chances of seeing new construction.

Many schools came on line following a school growth spurt in the 1960's, but from then on school construction slid to a great extent. Because local budgets were tight, operations funding was the essential concern, not even to think of the possibility of a new building while pipes leaked, heating systems became outdated and lacked replacement parts.

School maintenance workers were hired (where possible) to make the necessary repairs needed to make a system work and school to open, which seemed to be what school administrators were used to living with, despite their anguish and desires for better facilities. School budgets for so many years and today for that matter have not been funded at the level they should, despite the 1983 Education Reform Law, as the proposed increase did not last with promises unkept over the years.

While today their seems to be some "hope" that a sound educational Chapter 70 Funding formula "could" happen if legislators follow through with actions and votes to make it happen, the next few months will tell that story.

MSBA funding — a huge boost

Over two decades ago, the formation of the Massachusetts School Building Authority was established and funded to support new schools and projects. This was a God-send to local school districts to allow them to develop a plan, look at the most serious local school building needs and, yes, even to contemplate the possibilities of a new school. Can you believe it?

The agency under the direction of Katherine Craven, an incredible leader and now Vice President for Financial Affairs at Babson College and also now the Chair of the Massachusetts Board of Education, launched an initiative to put out a request for proposals for new school buildings across the state plus eventually even some model schools.

There was a sense of huge relief that maybe now we can improve the space that our quality educators work with — either new facilities or renovations of current schools which for many was the only answer. As new testing and curriculum guidelines were coming from the Dept. of Education, Jack McCarthy became the new Executive Director for MSBA and moved ahead on plans for added future schools and renovations. Obviously, the funds are only so much as allocated by the Legislature so the requests had to fit into the MSBA budget.

New schools began to dot the Massachusetts landscape, while several communities were still struggling to get new schools or make any renovations.

Local votes needed prior to MSBA funding

Requirements for new school construction are many and essential for proper planning and funding to meet guidelines. One of these rules is that the local communities must have a passing vote to have construction take place and for many communities this has been a major issue for a host of reasons including locations, local tax structure, lack of a sense of need or a host of other factors.

I always say that when a local community makes that vote for a new school, they have added to the quality of the community. Yes, quality instruction can take place in an older building but great current technology and quality instruction can and will assist great teachers to do even a better job. The point is local votes are required by proper votes based on the city/town/school district charter.

RANT OF THE WEEK

During the past week, an older gentleman was in a local Town Crier area store and asked for a chair so he could tie his shoe. The counter attendee said, "you can not do that here."

JUST A NOTE AND SOME FISCAL UPDATES

First thanks for your comments on last week's column plus some extractions I felt you would like to know from the Morning Pulse, including the following: Japan's Pension Fund warns of global investing losses; CBO expects deficit to grow more than projected, warns that tariff hikes could harm growth; AAA reports gasoline demand at all time high; Back on campus, students confront a challenging housing market; Close to one-third of healthcare employees have never received cybersecurity training; Fidelity says number of 401k millionaires hits record high; Pentagon underinvesting in artificial intelligence; Largest local governments in Michigan carry $5.5B in pension debt; Rising pension costs contribute to higher property taxes; More than 70 percent of economists think a US recession will strike by the end of 2021; the economy may be starting to slow and Real estate is taking notice.

without my extraordinary team, who worked incredibly hard for a longshot candidate because they believed in me and our mission like they believe in our country."

"And I definitely couldn't have done it without everyone who supported me and came out to events and donated and volunteered for this campaign all across this country."

"Each of you reminds me, everywhere and every day, of what truly makes America great."

"From the bottom of my heart, thank you."

"While this is the end of my campaign, it is certainly not the end of our efforts."

"I will once again be running for Congress in the 6th District of Massachusetts, my home, and I can't wait to get back at it."

"I will be relaunching my organization, Serve America — which helped take back the House last cycle by electing 21 service-driven Democrats in tough districts across America — to work with all of you to keep the House, to flip the Senate, and to win back statehouses across the country next November. Because those down-ballot races are every bit as important as the Presidential."

"And most of all, I will be campaigning my ass off for whoever wins our nomination in 2020."

"Donald Trump is going to be harder to beat than most people think. But we can, and we must, beat him — because our country, our values, and our future depend on it."

"As a party, we need to spend these next months doing everything we can to determine who our strongest nominee will be. And as we do so, we can't be distracted by the latest outrage on Twitter or the reality show politics of the day."

"We need to stay grounded in what it's going to take to win over voters — all kinds of Democrats, Independents like the Obama-Trump voters, and even disaffected Republicans — and bring the country together around beating Donald Trump."

"Because you can be a Democrat, or a Republican, or an Independent. But if you're an American, you know that we're better than this."

"And we're going to prove it at the ballot box in 2020."

"Now before I go, I want to say one more thing."

"My mentor in college, Reverend Peter Gomes, once said, 'Hope is the stuff that gets us through and beyond when the worst that can happen, happens.'"

"And oftentimes, in these past couple of years, and even in these past couple of weeks, it's felt like the worst that could happen in America has happened."

"But when I traveled the country and district over these last several months, I found hope."

"I found hope in the veterans I met who are working to end the stigma around mental health by sharing their stories for the very first time."

"I found hope in the kids who are walking out of school demanding progress on climate change and guns."

"I found hope in the teachers and reporters who have been striking for basic pay."

"I found hope in the women who have been marching for basic respect."

"I found hope in the amazing, diverse, talented group of leaders we have running for president."

"And I find hope here in this room, and in rooms like it across America, where Democrats are banding together — despite all of our differences — to beat Donald Trump."

"And to fight for who we are."

"That hope is what gets us, as individuals, through the darkest of times."

"And it is what will lead our country through the darkest of times as well."

"You know, I often say that in the men and women I served with in Iraq, I saw the best of America in the worst of circumstances. In the midst of a war many of us disagreed with — a war I spoke out against — we always knew that despite the failures in Washington, we were fighting for each other."

"We had each other's backs. And we believed in our values so much that they were willing to fight for them."

"Well, I saw the same thing in this campaign."

"I saw Americans from all backgrounds, all races, all religions, standing up and fighting for our values because they believe in our country — even when it lets them down."

"Especially when it lets them down."

"Because THAT is when the country needs us most."

"We have a lot of work to do, and some tough months ahead of us, but we can do this. We wake up tomorrow in the America that we make. And I'm so proud to be making it better with all of you."

"Thank you."

End of summer a popular time for tomatoes

By HEATHER BURNS
News Correspondent

The avid gardener and foodie always looks forward to the end of August, also known as the beginning of the bountiful fall harvest. Summer tomatoes are one of the first and most popular of the summer/fall produce season.

Tomatoes are one of the easiest summer vegetables to grow. They do well in large, sunny vegetable gardens of the experienced and serious gardener, as well as in a pot on your patio, for the gardening novice.

There are three basic sized tomatoes: standard (large), plum (medium), and cherry (small, bite size). There are also three variety types.

Most varieties are indeterminate. This variety has vines and continues to produce new shoots and flowers after fruit production has begun. Because this plant continues to grow for an extended period of time, they need to be staked or grown on a trellis.

Heirloom is the name of old fashioned varieties that have been around for decades. All seeds are open pollinated and grow true to their type of seed.

Hybrid varieties are seeds that have been developed through international crossing of varieties. Seeds from these fruits will not produce the same fruit as the mother plant.

Both Heirloom and Hybrid varieties come in an array of colors and flavors, assuring you can find the tomato that is just right for you.

Popular Heirloom varieties are:

Aussie - this huge, red fruit has a blend of acid and sugar flavor, giving it that old fashioned, traditional taste.

Green Zebra - which is green and yellow striped, has a sweet, tangy flavor.

Brandywine - this large, deep pink tomato has rich, classic heirloom taste.

Mr. Stripy - red and yellow stripes give this bi-colored tomato a unique look and sweet, fruity flavor.

Italian Heirloom - a full flavored classic, red tomato with a unique heart shape.

Cherry Roma - the most popular plum tomato, has a sweet and spicy flavor.

Black Cherry - small and dark with a sweet, complex flavor.

Some of the most well known Hybrid varieties are:

Big Beef - this all American, large, red favorite gives an impressive yield and classic tomato flavor.

Super Sweet 100 - a cherry sized hybrid that is bright red in color, full of sweet flavor, and offers production of 100 tomatoes per stem.

Sun Gold - intense fruit flavor in a small, yellow package.

San Marzano - low in juice and high in flavor makes this classic Italian, plum tomato the standard for making paste.

To answer the age old question "Is a tomato a fruit or vegetable?" the answer is both!

Botanically speaking, a tomato is a fruit, as it has a ripened flower ovary and contains seeds. The same can be said for other produce, such as zucchinis, pumpkins and green beans, but somehow controversy only circles around the title of the tomato.

Nutritionally, the term fruit is used to describe sweet, fleshy botanical fruits that are high in fructose, and generally served as snacks or desserts.

Vegetable refers to a wide variety of plant life that is not high in fructose and is generally served as part of a main dish or side dish.

One could argue that a tomato has more in common with other vegetables that are part of the fruit/vegetable family, like eggplant and green peppers than fruits like cantaloupe and watermelon. So, nutritionally speaking, it is safe to refer to a tomato as a vegetable.

Although tomatoes are almost 95 percent water, they are still packed with nutrients. One tomato offers 1 gram of protein. They are also an excellent source of vitamin C and A, which are essential components for healthy vision and immune function, as well as vitamin K and potassium, which assists in blood clotting and can help reduce blood pressure.

It is easy to add this delicious and versatile fruit/vegetable to your everyday diet.

For breakfast, tomatoes pair beautifully with eggs and omelets. For lunch, you can easily add a slice of fresh tomato to your favorite sandwich, as well as many types of salads.

Tomatoes also make a great base for many soup recipes.

For dinner, the possibilities are endless, as tomatoes pair well with virtually every type of meat, fish, and other vegetables.

If you enjoy a little spice in your life (and your diet), there are many easy recipes for making salsa. Salsa is an easy tomato addition to breakfast, toast or burritos. It makes a great condiment for sandwiches, hot dogs, burgers, and of course, chips. Cover chicken or fish with salsa before baking for extra zing of flavor. Sprinkle with shredded Mexican cheese one minute before removing from the oven for an easy, Mexican tomato and cheese flavor.

I have two personal favorite dishes for the summer tomato.

The first is Fried Green Tomatoes. This traditional, southern treat is easy to make, and is a great summer party food or fun side dish. You can use red tomatoes instead of green (not yet ripe tomatoes), but you must make sure they are not over ripe, or they will turn out soggy instead of crisp.

My other favorite dish for fresh tomatoes is my mother's old recipe that our family calls Sonja's Summer Salad. Simply dice fresh tomatoes (using more than one variety is best), cucumber, green pepper, and celery. Mix in a few crushed cloves of garlic, salt, pepper, vinegar and oil (¼ cup vinegar to 1 or 2 tbsp oil). Mix and chill. This salad is easy, lasts in the refrigerator for days, and takes me back to my childhood summers of picking vegetables for dinner from my mother's impressive garden.

Fortunately, my children were able to enjoy this same experience with their grandmother in her beloved vegetable garden, and this recipe is now a summer family favorite.

If you haven't planted your own tomato plants for harvesting, fresh picked tomatoes are readily available in abundance at your local grocery store, and at many local farm stands and farmer's markets.

Tomato or tomahto, it doesn't matter how you say it, as long as you don't miss out on locally grown, fresh tomatoes! For easy tomato recipes including Fried Green Tomato and Tomato Salsa, visit www.allrecipes.com and search tomato.

Brandywine Yellow - similar to the original Brandywine Heirloom variety, but with an intense sweet/tart balance.

Armenian food festivals feature great food and music

By PAIGE IMPINK
News Correspondent
paige@yourtowncrier.com

Ethnic food festivals and bazaars are a real treat to visit and a way to enjoy the cuisine of another culture. In the Merrimack Valley there are Greek food festivals, Portuguese festivals and Celtic celebrations.

However, you may not be as familiar with the Armenian bazaars. There are several in the area including the Hye Pointe bazaar in Bradford hosted by the Armenian Apostolic Church each August, St. Gregory's Food Festival in North Andover (Sept. 8, 12 - 5:30 p.m.) and St. Vartanantz in Chelmsford (Nov. 22-23). There are also several in Watertown and Cambridge, areas with large Armenian populations including St. Stephens (Nov. 1-2) and Holy Trinity (Nov. 15).

Armenian food fests are sponsored by local churches and the main draw is the food. Having the chance to enjoy favorite foods of one's childhood, especially grilled specialties, is a treat. There are tables of baked goods such as paklava, a light and crispy layered pastry. You may know the Greek version, baklava. Khadayef is another favorite, made in large sheet pans using shredded layers of dough and cream filling or cinnamon dusted walnuts, drenched in a simple clear sugar syrup.

Another traditional item is choreg, a slightly sweet bread roll not dissimilar in flavor from the Mexican concha or Portuguese sweet bread. Choreg uses mahleb, a spice derived from ground cherry pits. Other treats include almond cookies, and boreg, a flaky layered cheese and spinach savory appetizer.

Dried fruits and roasted nuts can also be found, as can rolled and stuffed grape leaves called yalanchi, and eetch, a tomato and bulgur wheat dream. On occasion, lahmejun is sold, a thin meat pizza on a leavened crust, similar to pita. Fun fact: in Montreal there are drive through lahmejun shops; the pizza is so popular.

Visitors line up early at the festivals to get plates of lamb shish kebab, losh kebab (hamburger), chicken shish or the favorite khey-ma. Church volunteers prepare all week and grills are going non-stop to keep the meats flowing. Khey-ma, a specialty, is finely ground raw beef with bulgur cracked wheat topped with onion and fresh parsley. It is known to the Lebanese as kibbeh.

All items are served with pita bread, salad, and a generous helping of rice pilaf. Armenian pilaf is made with chicken broth, vermicelli browned in butter, and rice. Take out is popular and people stand in long lines to get some of these special meals to go. One need not be Armenian to enjoy this wonderful food.

Music is another tradition. Musicians play the oud, a lute-like instrument which has a round "belly," clarinet, guitar, and the dumbeg, a drum which is shaped to sit between the knees and played a bit like bongos. Visitors to the food festivals are often found dancing Armenian circle dances. The Kochari is a traditional dance with many variations, but all are characterized by participants holding hands or linking pinky fingers to form a large circle, often coiling around the room as more and more people join.

acterized by participants holding hands or linking pinky fingers to form a large circle, often coiling around the room as more and more people join.

Armenia today is a tiny country, having been invaded through the centuries by surrounding nations and decimated by genocide. It is bordered by Georgia, Turkey, Azerbaijan and Iran and was among the first countries to adopt Christianity.

Armenian cuisine is similar to Lebanese, Greek and other cultures of the region, each with adaptations unique to their own country. It is not surprising given the similar resource base of meat, vegetables, and flours, and the many crossing of borders and invasions, that similar dishes emerged.

Plan to attend an Armenian festival this fall and enjoy a plate of nourishing food while absorbing the friendliness and pride of a fine culture.

Tewksbury set to receive record funds for education, roads, ambulance and Livingston Street improvements

(Eds. note: This story has been updated to include a comment from Senator Barry Finegold)

BOSTON — With increased state assistance for education, roads, and improvements to Livingston Street and the Tewksbury Fire Department, Governor Charlie Baker approved the FY20 budget voted on and advocated for by Representatives David Robertson and Tram Nguyen, and Senator Barry Finegold.

The House of Representatives voted unanimously, and the Senate concurred with only one voting in opposition, with Gov. Baker signing off on final approval with no rejections.

"I always promised a local focus, to bring back state funding to the district where it's needed most. That's why I am so pleased with this budget," said Rep. Robertson. "We increased local aid to local schools like Tewksbury by about $270 million dollars, with Tewksbury Public Schools receiving $13.3 million directly. This is a locally focused budget, yet focuses on some broader issues like continuing to fight the opioid epidemic and improving the MBTA performance. We fought for better services right in our district, supporting our residents, and investing in a better town. I think the delegation did excellent this budget, and will continue to be champions for local issues."

Local budget amendments for Tewksbury, championed by the delegation, included money to assist Tewksbury in purchasing an ambulance for complete town coverage, and for safety improvements to the Livingston Street recreational field sidewalks, parking lots, and pathways. The delegation was also successful in earmarking state funding to reimburse the town for emergency services rendered to the state hospital population. Unrestricted general aid, which allows the town to spend on locally decided priorities also increased, with Tewksbury receiving approximately $3 million dollars in direct assistance from the state, as well as road repair assistance clocking in at $921,389.

"I am proud to join my colleagues in the State Legislature in voting for a carefully negotiated budget with a focus on investments toward improving funding for education, the environment, housing, and resources to combat the opioid epidemic in our communities. I am especially grateful for the collaboration with my colleagues in the Tewksbury delegation to obtain local earmarks for the Livingston recreation area and our public safety services," said

Rep. Nguyen upon passing of the budget in the chamber.

In addition to individual requests for Tewksbury, the FY20 supported many other local and state priorities, including $150 million for the Bureau of Substance Addiction Services to continue providing addiction recovery, and $50 million dollars to help preserve assisted living and nursing facilities for recovering senior citizens. Educational aid increased $270 million dollars statewide, including money to help alleviate waiting lists at vocational schools across the Commonwealth. Public Housing Authorities altogether received a $5 million dollar increase, to $72 million in an effort to fight the shortage of public housing available for seniors, veterans, and those with disabilities.

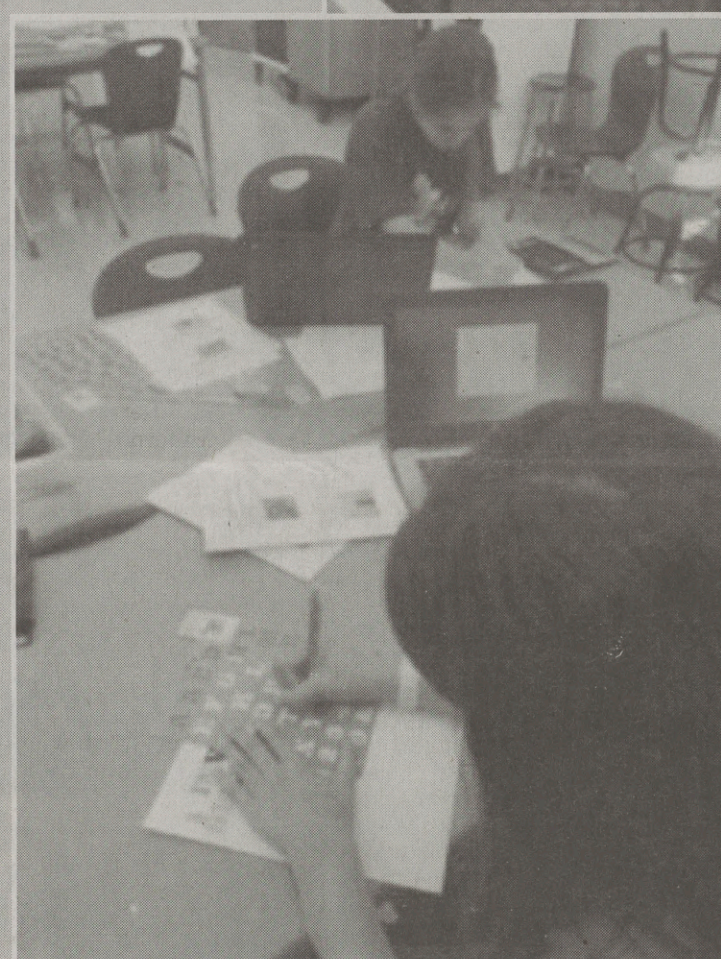

"My number one priority for this budget was public education funding, and specifically to fully fund the Special Education Circuit Breaker," said Sen. Finegold. "I'm very proud that we increased public education spending by the largest amount in 20 years and that we'll be fully funding the circuit breaker. For too long, parents of children with special education needs have been pitted against other parents in the district to compete for limited resources for their children. We need to provide every single child in Massachusetts, regardless of zip code, income, or ability, with the best education possible. I'm also thrilled to fund deserving projects locally, including improvements to Livingston Street and the purchase of a new ambulance for the Town of Tewksbury."

Health Dept. alerts residents after EEE detected in neighboring communities

TEWKSBURY — Today's online reports show that the Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH) has found EEE (Eastern Equine Encephalitis) positive mosquito samples in Middlesex and Essex counties. The list of communities includes samples from Andover, Lowell and Methuen. To date, The Town of Tewksbury has not had a positive pool found in this community, however, due to the increased activity the MDPH has raised the EEE risk level in Tewksbury, Dracut, North Andover and Haverhill to moderate. Please visit <http://www.mosquitoresults.com/> for a complete listing of findings and updated risk maps.

For all information and inquiries regarding the local mosquito control program and the services available please visit the website for the Central Massachusetts Mosquito Control <https://www.cmmcp.org/season-summary-data> or phone CMMC at 508 393-3055.

As always, the Tewksbury Health Department urges all residents to read and follow these important safety tips: Avoid Mosquito Bites

• Be aware of peak mosquito hours: The hours from dusk to dawn are peak biting times for many mosquitoes. Consider rescheduling outdoor activities that occur during the evening or early morning. If you are outdoors at any time and notice mosquitoes around you, take steps to avoid being bitten by moving indoors, covering up and/or wearing repellent.

• Clothing can help reduce mosquito bites: Although it may be difficult to do when it's hot, wearing long sleeves, long pants and socks while outdoors will help keep mosquitoes away from your skin.

• Apply insect repellent when you go outdoors. Use a repellent with DEET, permethrin, picaridin, IR3535 or oil of lemon eucalyptus according to the instructions on the product label. DEET products should not be used on infants under two months of age and should be used in concentrations of 30 percent or less on older children. Oil of lemon eucalyptus should not be used on children under three years of age. Permethrin products are intended for use on items such as clothing, shoes, bed nets and camping gear and should not be applied directly to your skin.

• Mosquito-Proof Your Home

• Drain standing water: Many mosquitoes lay their eggs in standing water. Limit the number of places around your home for mosquitoes to breed by either draining or getting rid of items that hold water. Check rain gutters and drains. Empty any unused flowerpots and wading pools and change water in birdbaths frequently.

• Install or repair window and door screens: Some mosquitoes like to come indoors. Keep them outside by having tightly-fitting screens on all of your windows and doors.

Information about EEE and reports of current and historical EEE virus activity in Massachusetts can be found on the MDPH website.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention the EEE virus is a rare cause of brain infections or encephalitis. Very few human cases are reported across the U.S. each year, but EEE can be fatal or leave victims with serious complications and neurological problems.

Wilmington Pop Warner begins another season with new league president

By JAMIE POTE
Sports Editor

jamiepote@hotmail.com
WILMINGTON - For the third straight year, Wilmington Pop Warner has a new League President.

And the new director of the program, which is over 60 years old, is a familiar face, Joe McCauley.

McCauley has been the Pop Warner Football Director for each of the past six years and also started up the popular Middle School program last year. After Bill Cavanaugh decided to step down after one year as president, McCauley shifted gears and was named President, while, Shawn Maguire, a longtime WPW coach, has moved in to run the middle school team.

With another season of youth football and cheerleading underway with practices down at the Glen Road Fields, McCauley was asked about how the transition is going to this point.

"The role so far is demanding, but I have been involved and want to see both youth football and cheer succeed," he said. "I really enjoy doing this. I started the middle school program from scratch last year and with Pop Warner already a running program, I have been able to step right into role without much of a learning curve. I have used my past experience as football director so now starting another program made that transition much easier."

McCauley - whose daughter Chloe went through WPW and is now a Division 1 collegiate freshman cheerleader at the University of New Hampshire - was asked about his everyday duties as the president.

"I am responsible for the operations of the program," he explained. "It starts with registration of all the players. Picking coaches and make sure both football and cheerleading coaches are certified to coach the kids. I make sure all the rosters are complete with National Pop Warner and all the paper work for each participant is complete.

I work with town for all our permits to use the fields and snack shack.

"I am at practices to make sure all is going well and talk to parents and answer questions. I work with the Board of Directors in their roles and responsibilities to make sure we run smooth for each practice and game days. I also monitor both football and cheer practices for safety and work with cheer directors to follow all cheer policy set by Pop Warner."

While all of that can be demanding and a lot on someone's plate, one thing is for sure, 'safety' comes before everything.

"Safety is are number one priority and always the main concerns of our parents," he said. "Our coaches in both football and cheerleading all go through many hours of training to learn new safety procedures and protect our young athletes."

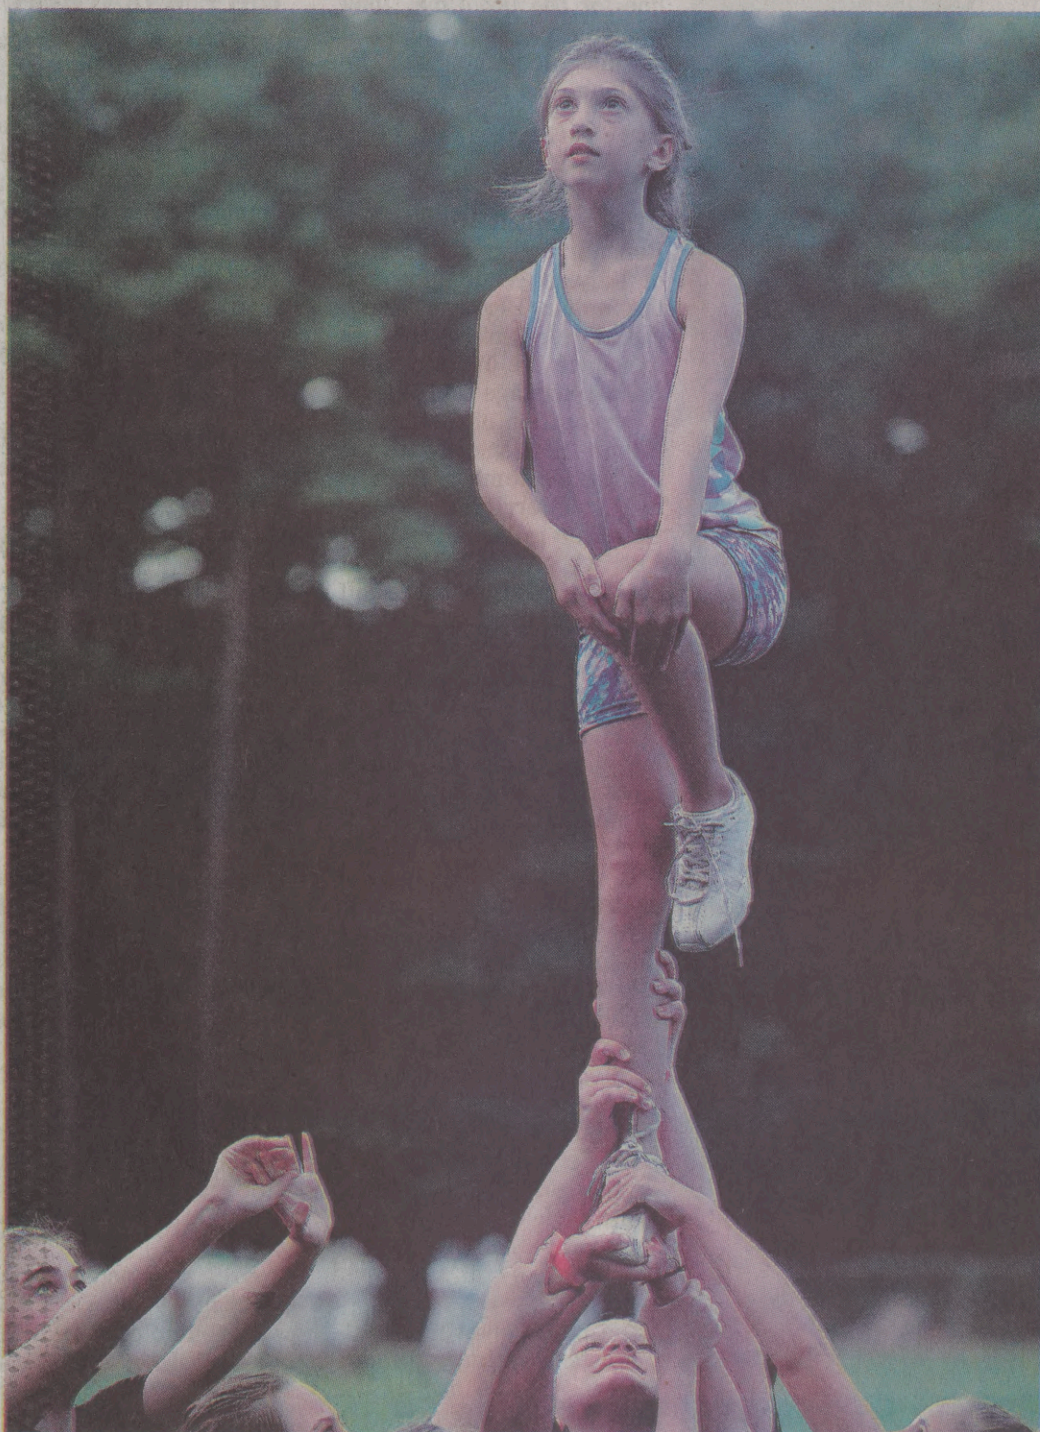

Excluding the Middle School program - which has 45 players - because it's not affiliated with WPW, there's 66 football players who are divided up into three teams and then there's 65 cheerleaders, who are also divided up into three teams.

"Wilmington Pop Warner is still a strong program and very competitive in our Eastern Mass League," said McCauley. "Our numbers are not as strong in the past, but I see that in every town across Massachusetts."

Despite that, and the changes at the top, WPW remains extremely strong, with many dedicated and hardworking volunteers striving to teach the kids about football and cheerleading, while teaching sportsmanship, and of course having some fun.

"We have a great set of coaches in both football and cheerleading that coach at the high school level so our kids are getting the best coaching around," he said. "We have a new board with seventeen parents, who are all volunteers this year. They are all very energetic and want to see both football and cheerleading succeed in Wilmington. I see youth football remaining strong in Wilmington and look forward to continuing the your football and cheer culture and preparing our Wilmington kids to play at the next level."

Two-way player, Wedge gearing up for big season

Trent Wedge, age 12, returns for his seventh season playing youth football here in Wilmington. Above he goes through a drill during last Thursday's practice.

WILMINGTON- A sport like football can bring out the best or worst in a person on the field and off.

For Trent Wedge, it is all good things all the time.

Trent will be entering the seventh grade and is a member of the Wilmington Middle School Football program.

This will be Trent's seventh year playing tackle football in Wilmington. You can imagine Trent likes tackling and making contact with other players.

"Depending on the scale of how much it helps during the game, or if you're in practice, it feels nice when you make a tackle," he said.

On the field he plays both offensively and defensively as a wide receiver and corner back, but it was an easy choice when he was asked to pick between the two.

"[I prefer] defense, you can make plays offense but you can win games on defense," he said.

While Trent plays the game that he loves and routes for the Patriots and Julian Edelman while he is home on the TV, he has become a strong, admirable 12-year-old because of an unexpected health issue that happened back in September of 2016, when Trent and his mother, Tori, and father, Joe, went on a family camping trip.

"We found her passed out, and we took her to the hospital," said Joe Wedge. "She went through multiple tests to see what was the matter, still unresponsive. She was in a coma for three years."

At this time, Trent's mother is responsive, but her brain isn't interacting with her muscles as well as they should, causing her to be immobile. She does go through therapy to see if anything can happen to get her to walk again.

"It's still a mystery... It's going to be a long road, [football] has definitely helped us out," Joe said.

The Wilmington Football Community has rallied around the Wedge Family showing complete support which something Joe and Trent say they will never forget. During a game last season, Trent's mom had enough strength to attend. The team gave her the game ball, hugging and kissing her, and it made for a special and emotional moment.

"You could tell she was emotional, they were emotional, tremendous," said Shawn Maguire, Trent's coach.

"She still talks about it," added Joe Wedge.

Maguire added that he admires how Trent has dealt with such difficulties in his young life.

"Trent gets the same qualities from his mom who has been through so much and his dad who has been a steady rock," said Maguire. "Trent is a mirror of them, he just constantly works. He's a dream to coach."

Trent eventually wants to play football in college, and his dad sees a bright future in his son.

"Trent's a very realistic kid, he just works hard. The work he puts into it at practice, the way he's grown each year getting better the progress is amazing," said his Dad.

7-year-old Teagan Landry

SHE has caught on nicely to her new sport of football

By JOSH CAREDEO
Sports Correspondent

sports@yourtowncrier.com
WILMINGTON- Pop Warner has been in existence in the town of Wilmington for over 60 years.

As part of the Eastern Mass League, Pop Warner has always been inclusive in allowing players of all ages, boy or girl, to play.

Enrollment for Wilmington

Pop Warner has been the same the past couple years, as 66 football players make up three teams in the league this year, a U8, U10, and U12 team.

One of those players is a seven-year-old girl by the name of Teagan Landry. Teagan, along with her mother Keighla Dalton, moved to Wilmington four years ago.

Teagan will be entering the second grade and will be turning eight in two weeks. She is excited to meet her teachers and classmates for the upcoming year, but more importantly, is excited to play her first year of football.

At a young age, she used to go her uncle's, Keighla's little brother's, football games and cheer him on.

Teagan likes watching football players tackle each other on the field. "I want to tackle my uncle [and aunt]," she said.

It was a pretty simple conversation for mom to have with Teagan.

"[She likes running around outside, she has a lot of energy] so she insisted she wanted try [football], so we [signed her up for it]," said Dalton.

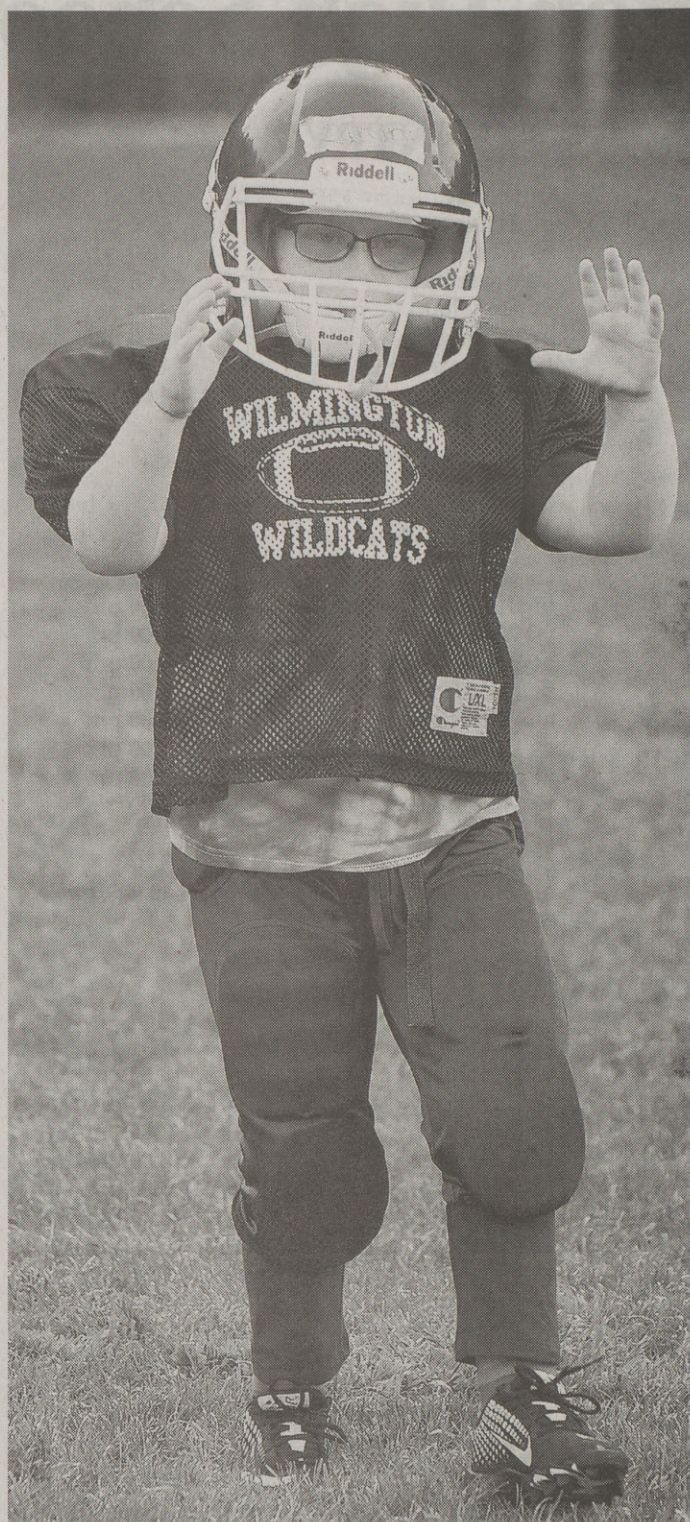

Teagan has friends who are boys that play football, but says she is not afraid of them.

"Everyone used to tell me to be scared because of the boys, but I think I'm more afraid for the boys because she is pretty tough," Keighla Dalton said.

Dalton, who was a cheerleader for 14 years, is very appreciative of how the Pop Warner community in Wilmington has treated her daughter.

"They were very welcoming, and they've been helpful so far," she said.

Middle School team ready to open season

By JOSH CAREDEO
Sports Correspondent

sports@yourtowncrier.com
WILMINGTON- After a stellar first year as a program, Wildcat Middle School Football is primed and ready to go in year two.

Last year's Varsity squad finished the year with record of 6-2 while the JV team posted a 4-2 record.

The stats from last year's team also indicate the team's success. The varsity team's offense put up a whopping 215 total points over the course of an eight game schedule and the defense only gave up 98 total points on their side of the ball, which is astonishingly low.

"[It was] great football last year, they always lost to the same two teams, but it was great football," said coach Shawn Maguire.

Maguire has taken over the reigns of the middle school program after Joe McCauley started it from scratch last year. McCauley moved on to become the Wilmington Pop Warner President. Maguire has 31 years of experience as a football coach, spending about a quarter of a century as the Burlington High School Varsity Coach, while he's been involved with WPW for the past six years. During that time, he has coached or followed most of the current middle school players flourish through the system.

"It's a great group for parents to come out and see, it's the future right here, so it'll be fun," Maguire said.

This year, there's 45 players involved with the Middle School program, which is ten more than last year. The team will be sporting a new look this year, as well, with new helmets and new uniforms through Riddell, a nationally known sporting equipment company.

Of the 45 players, 25 of them are eighth graders, who will lead the team onto the field when the season kicks off in September. Maguire is excited with the opportunity of getting the players ready for the entire season.

"[You are] facing kids of different sizes, shapes, and speeds, so just mentally being ready [is key]," he said.

He went on to say that he doesn't want them to isolate themselves from the sixth and seventh graders.

"It's one of things I focus on right away, how we become a team, and not just be separate grades," he added.

Players have not been assigned to a Varsity and JV team yet, but this year's WMS team is a family nonetheless.

The 45 players include: Ali Aboukal, Brandon Almas, Mantvydas Banevicius, Jared Bishop, Andre Bouras, Sean Brady, Kenneth Branley, Matthew Breen, Colin Brown, Aiden Burke, Julien Cella, Ryan Copson, Conor Crane, Michael DeRose, Joseph Fennelly, Nathan Ford, Kyle Gabaree, Ben Gibbons, Nojus Giniotas, Kyle Gray, Nikolaus Iascone, Nolan Joyce;
